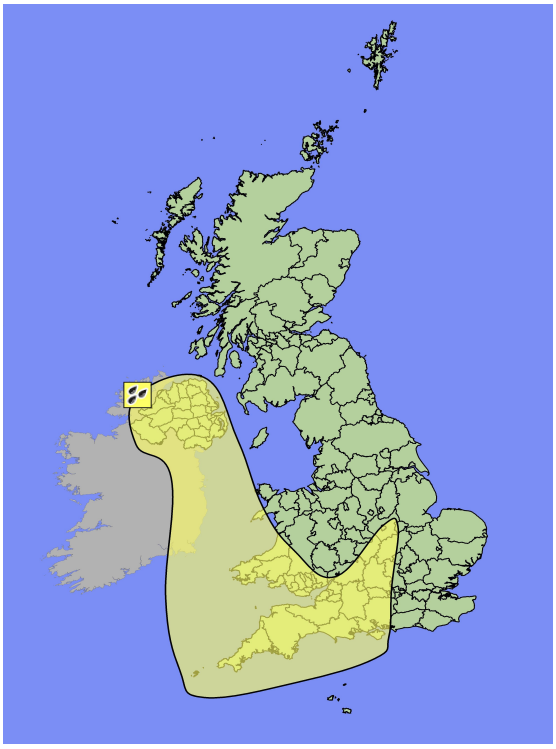
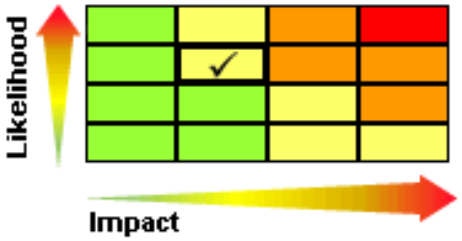
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
An area of heavy showers and thunderstorms is expected to move north across more western parts of the UK during Thursday, whilst there is a risk of heavy rain developing along a cold front over parts of central southern England the Midlands later in the day.

Rainfall totals of 30-50 mm are possible very locally in a period of a few hours, though in the vast majority of places amounts are expected to be rather less than this.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 03:00 on Thu, 03rd Nov 2011 until 23:59 on Thu, 03rd Nov 2011

Heavy and locally thundery showers are expected at times during Thursday. Southwest England and south and west Wales are at risk during the morning, Northern Ireland during the afternoon, with the main risk period for central southern England and the Midlands being during the late afternoon and evening. The public should be aware that as a result of the heavy rain there could be some surface water flooding, leading to local travel disruption.
